Waiting for the UFOs

by Steven Saint

On June 12 at approximately 10:40 p.m., a good three weeks before anyone had seen the summer sci-fi blockbuster, "Independence Day," some light appeared in the sky over Lemon Grove and Spring Valley that no one has yet been able to identify.

A half-dozen witnesses say they saw a metallic-looking object that glowed in varying degrees of intensity. A small band of lights around the circumference moved in a rotating sequence. At one point, the object glowed so close and bright that the witnesses could not look straight at it.

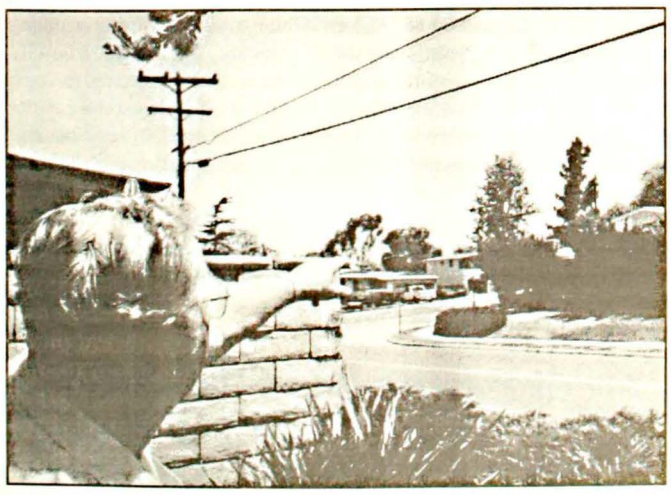
Plotting the reports that came in to local television stations and the Mutual Unidentified Flying Object Network — MUFON — San Diego hotline, the orb seems to have flown from a point over eastern Lemon Grove to Spring Valley and then southward where it was spotted by San Ysidro residents.

MUFON investigator Eric Herr, an inventor who's lived in the Rolando neighborhood west of La Mesa for the last 30 years, has been interviewing witnesses about the June 12 incident. Was it a private airplane? A miniature hot air balloon? A trick of the light?

Until someone figures that out, the phenomenon will remain an "unidentified flying object" — a UFO. East County has had plenty of UFOs over the past 30 years, perhaps more sightings than any other part of San Diego County.

"We get consistently good reports from Spring Valley," says Herr, whose reports are eventually sent to Dallas, Texas, home of MUFON, a grassroots association of science-minded people willing to investigate UFOs in their spare time. "I've often wondered why Spring Valley should have virtually all the reports from San Diego County."

CE I The June 12 UFO sighting falls into the category of "Close Encounter of the First Kind," a term coined by the late astronomer J. Allen Hynek in his book, The UFO Experience. Hynek was hired by the Air Force in the 1950s to help explain the growing number of UFO sightings. Hynek and his academic colleagues were able to trace the various reports to normal events such as Venus, weather balloons, conventional aircraft and pranksters.



Bill Gilchrist remembers seeing two orange orbs over Lemon Grove in 1966.

When the Air Force team couldn't explain at least one-fourth of the sightings, Hynek believed it was only scientific to continue documenting UFO phenomena. The Center for UFO Studies (CUFOS) in Evanston, Ill., has been databasing investigations for almost 25 years.

A Close Encounter of the First Kind (CE-I) is a visual encounter within 500 feet. There is no interaction with either the environment or people, something like Bill Gilchrist's sighting in Lemon Grove 30 years ago.

Gilchrist still lives in the house a stone's throw from Monterey Heights Elementary School. It was after sundown on Dec. 19 when Gilchrist noticed his dog was barking excitedly in the backyard bordering Canton Drive. He went out the front door and headed around the house.

From the corner of his yard, he saw two orange orbs hovering in the sky somewhere beyond the school. It was hard to tell how far away they were. They were perfectly stationary, about the size of tennis balls, one at a slightly higher elevation than the other.

Gilchrist says he called to his wife, Fay, to come out and see. She joined him and they decided quickly to find some binoculars. By the time they glanced up again, the objects were gone.

Gilchrist says he didn't mention the experience to anybody due to the numerous kooky stories in the media. But soon after, he read about a woman in Las Vegas asking people to report their sightings to her. He called the number listed in the paper and told his story, which somehow ended up in the database at Hynek's CUFOS.

"I wish I could tell you I saw rings around the globes, but I didn't," he says. "They didn't move and I couldn't tell if they were two blocks away or 15 miles."

Gilchrist has seen a lot in his time. He was a private pilot from 1952 until his mild stroke in 1988. After a brief stint in the Navy during World War II, he served in the Army's Counter-Intelligence Corps during the Korean War. Nowadays, he spends months bird-hunting in Mexico.

He knows the difference between red and green running lights, landing and taxi lights and rotating beacons. He's seen the tricks light can play, reflecting off low scud in random patterns as the uneven clouds sail past.

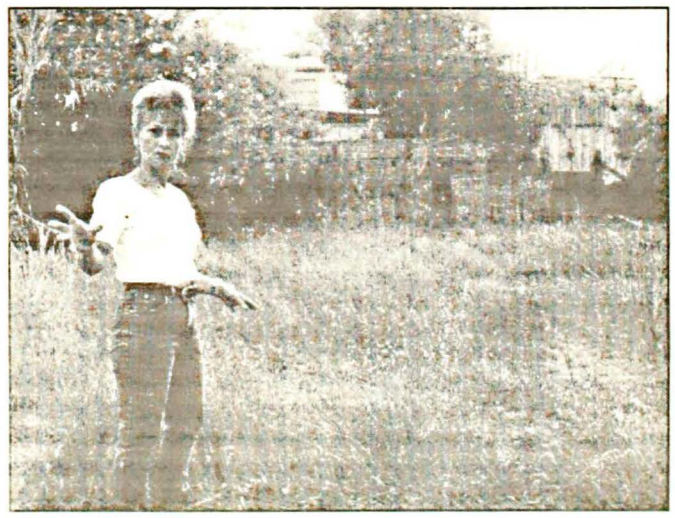
"I'm not a UFO buff and I think a lot of these stories are brought on by too many piña coladas or the tenth beer of the night," he says. "I can tell you what I saw for that 11/2 minutes was not like anything I'd ever seen before or after."

Other known CE-Is in East County include nocturnal lights over Spring Valley on Nov. 25, 1974 (a ruby-red mass of lights flying west, dropping three oval-shaped objects) and lights over La Mesa on Aug. 16, 1978.

More intriguing, perhaps, is the CE II close encounters that leave physical evidence to study and measure. When Eric Herr heard bright lights had been seen on June 12 near Crane Street in Lemon Grove, it came as no surprise. The most famous UFO in East County landed near Crane Street in 1973.

CE II Judy Fergus grew up on Crane Street but had moved out to her own place in Ocean Beach when she heard the news. Her mother, Harriet Midose, called excitedly about a spacecraft landing in the field behind the Von Willer's house.

Fergus went right over. The Von Willer house, now owned by a Native American lady named O'Brien, had a swimming pool in back bounded by a waist-high, red brick wall. Beyond the wall was a large field that opened to the north behind a four-plex of pink bungalows and ran down the hill to the nursery on Sweetwater Road.



Judy Fergus revisits the site of Lemon Grove's 1973 "crop circle" on Crane Street.

Judy ran down to the field through the high grass, almost as tall as she at five feet. There she saw the circle, a place where the grass was matted down in a counter-clockwise swirl.

Apparently the other night, Nov. 16, 1973, two 11-year-old boys living in the pink apartments were out playing in the field. As they passed a clump of bamboo,

M is for Mayor

Personal comments of Mayor Mary Sessom

Imagine being handed a precious gift, free for the taking, no questions asked. This wonderful gift could improve you life, the lives of your family, the lives of your whole community. Now imagine slapping the gift away, pretending it doesn't exist, thumbing your nose in disgust.

Hard to imagine? You bet! Happen often? It happens every election day when millions of Americans choose not to vote.

How often we see the news of citizens around the world, voting freely for the first time. Often these elections follow a bloody civil war, a government coup or decades of oppression. Thousands of eager people line up for hours, waiting for that special moment when each can drop their ballot in the box, unafraid and independent. And how often we hear, after an American election, that fewer than 50% of the people bothered to vote. We take so much for granted. A fundamental right that courageous people have fought and died for, yet so many of our citizens can't be bothered.

Let's change that this year in Lemon Grove! I urge every eligible person to register NOW so that you and our community will have a say come November. To promote this effort, I'm launching a voter registration drive, with the aid of community volunteers headed by Ranger Dick Whitmore. For starters, a registration table will be set up at the Concerts in the Park scheduled for July 11, 18, 25 and August 1. Look for the table and please take just two minutes to fill out the form. It's so easy! And come November you'll have your chance to have your say.

Letter to the Editor

The more they make, the more they take

Self-serving city staff and department heads have again this year divvied up the $7,129,000 operating budget, a 22 percent increase over 1994s $5,869,000 budget, leaving Lemon Grove nothing for capital improvements, not even a space for the zero. A permissive city council (3 to 2) approved the budget 7-2-96.

We knew Home Depot would add at least $450,000 in sales tax revenues to Lemon Grove, and it has turned out to be more like $600,000 per year. In fact, sales tax revenues are up $892,000 per year, or 76 percent of the increase in operating revenues over 1994's budget. All of this is going to departmental bureaucracy.

Improving Lemon Grove's infrastructure has a tangible and long term impact on our quality of life and property values. Conversely, adding to staff and departmental operating budgets is a consumption oriented budget.

We, who live in Lemon Grove, own property in Lemon Grove, and pay Lemon Grove taxes, have a self-serving interest to improve Lemon Grove. Capital improvements have little city staff or departmental support because it subtracts, dollar for dollar, from their operating budgets.

Our annual budget is not just an administrative tool, but a policy making document. It obligates the city far into the future. The city council has the duty to form policy — not abdicate that trust to staff. Only council members Craig Lake and Dwight Shelley had the conviction and correctness to reject the budget for a re-write. The city manager should have also submitted the budget sooner than June 20, 11 days before the effective date of the budget.

Incidentally, Lemon Grove's capital reserve fund is programmed to decline for the fourth year in a row, despite increasing revenues. But we're in great financial shape! They say.

Summer session is on the 'info highway'

by Lora Clark

Exciting things are going on at Lemon Grove Middle School. The summer session is in full swing, and the kids, up to their ears in computers, are having a ball.

"Kids love computers!" exclaimed Barbara Allen, principal. "Sometimes we have to squeeze the curriculum in there without the kids knowing it, and using computers is a great way to do that."

Literacy and technology are the focus this year, and IBM computers — 200 of them — are in constant use. The system, with every work station having Internet access, is the most advanced one being used for public education in California.

Thirteen courses were offered to students in fourth through seventh grades. Each student selected two different classes, one for first period, 8 to 10 a.m., and another for second period, 10 a.m. to noon.

Kids who need an introductory course in keyboarding are getting basic information about computers and are learning how to use the keyboard. Other classes are geared for those students who are more skilled in computer use.

The Information Super Highway class is being taught by Patty MacIntyre, telementor in the Lemon Grove School District. MacIntyre, last year's Teacher of the Year, has participated in workshops and seminars conducted by the state where she was trained in ways to bring the Internet into the classroom. She assigns a topic and uses what she calls "guided surfing" as she teaches her students how to explore the Internet. The kids are learning programming language and how to use a scanner.

MacIntyre has introduced them to Electric Postcard and e-mail, and is teaching her students the guidelines and the abbreviations they need to know in order to use the programs effectively.

The Art of Book Publishing is a creative-writing class in which students are using the network to create their own books, illustrations as well as the text.

HyperStudio is a program that allows students to produce multimedia reports on any subject. They are learning how to combine visuals, sound and text in order to expand and enhance their reports, which are saved to video tape and presented to the class.

Those students who are taking biology are learning how to interact with HyperStudio and how to run their artwork and other visuals through the scanner and put them on their computers.

Kids in the Math Exploration class are studying statistics. They are collecting, graphing, describing, interpreting and comparing data and are using Cruncher, a computer spreadsheet program, to organize and display their findings.

The Summer Tribune is a weekly newspaper written by and for the summer school kids at Lemon Grove Middle School. Students in this class use the Internet to research articles. They also interview staff members and students, conduct surveys, and write an advice column and sports reports.

In the Broadcasting class, students are working as teams to create video productions. They're operating video cameras and special-effects equipment, and they're learning how to edit their material and integrate sound and music in their productions.

They work on newscasts, which are broadcast every morning throughout the school via closed-circuit TV, and a related class, Investigative Reporting, helps them learn how to build various stories for the newscast.

"We're using only industry-based programs," said Allen. "We're looking to give our students skills for lifetime learning." In past years, the summer school program has offered recreational and supplemental subjects. This is the first time summer school courses have been designed to support the work that goes on throughout the year.

"These classes are highlights of what will be available for those kids who will be attending middle school in September," explained Allen. There are four other courses from which the students in grades four through seven could choose.

A program for children in kindergarten through third grade is also operating at Lemon Grove Middle School, with an identical K-3 program going strong at San Altos Elementary School. Here, too, the focus is on literacy — reading, writing and speaking.

The students are assessed the first day, tested the last day and participate in activities to improve their skills in between. Every student has at least one hour each day in the computer lab, where only software relating to reading and writing is used. The teachers have been trained on the programs in the computer lab that support the literacy program in the classrooms.

"Students will be problem-solvers and innovators; they will have a firm basis in technology as a tool. They will also be skilled communicators, proficient in the areas of speaking, writing, and reading."

Thus reads a portion of the Missions Statements in the process of being adopted by the Lemon Grove School District, and, judging by what's going on during the summer school session, that mission is certainly being accomplished.

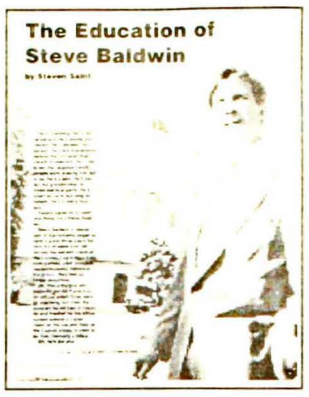
Society of Professional Journalists gives awards to East County writers



Seven East County journalists, including Forum Publications regulars Howard Owens and Steven Saint, received awards for news writing at the annual banquet sponsored by the San Diego Pro Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists (SPJ) last month.

Owens placed first in the profiles category among non-daily newspapers for his tribute to late Beat Farmer Dan "Country Dick Montana" McLain. Owens also placed second in the immigration/minority affairs category for a story he wrote for the San Diego Business Journal on San Diego's Chaldean community.

Saint received two second place awards for his articles, "The Education of Steve Baldwin" and "On the Trail of Olaf Wieghorst."

Other writers receiving awards were Sara Bongiorni of La Mesa, a former reporter for the Daily Californian, who won a first-place award for a feature story on the Anza-Borrego desert and second place for a story on transracial adoptions; Sandy Pasqua, who won second place for an Antiques & Collectibles piece on the history of gardens; Emmet Pierce, the San Diego Union-Tribune's El Cajon reporter, who took first-place honors for a series on endangered habitats; Billie Sutherland of Spring Valley, who placed first with a story on Mexican avocados and second with a story on illiteracy, both for the San Diego Business Journal; and Genie Thompson, who tied for second place with "Woman traces suffragist movement," a profile for Senior World.

All entries were judged by SPJ chapters in Florida and Chicago. Congratulations writers!

VICTOR M. CALDERON, BOARD PRESIDENT
GROSSMONT-CUYAMACA COMMUNITY COLLEGE DISTRICT

OPEN LETTER TO EAST COUNTY VOTERS

For approximately three years I have been privileged to be your representative on the Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District, Seat 4. My Board colleagues elected me on December 5, 1995 as President of the Board, a position of trust, leadership and confidence which I value and respect.

Our Community College District has always had a State-wide reputation for excellence earned by the faculty, staff and our predecessor Boards. That distinction has grown during my term in office because of the continued hard work and dedication of your current Board. I take great pride in my part in those successes.

The Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District is an integral part of East County. It has enriched this region and the many lives of its students, both past and present, as well as the educational, business and cultural communities. These contributions must continue for our country to maintain a leadership position as we approach the next millennium. My seventeen years of leadership experience as a policy maker at the community college and high school board levels is one of the many qualifications that I offer to the voters of East County.

In addition to my nearly three years at the Grossmont Community College District, I have served on the Imperial Valley Community College Board for over ten years, serving as their Board President for two terms. I have also served on the Brawley School District for four years where I was Board President.

My professional, business, public and civic accomplishments are credentials that I also bring to your Community College Board, further validating my request for your continued support. My undergraduate work was at the University of California at Los Angeles where I received a B.S. Degree in Business Administration, Accounting. I earned a Masters Degree in Education from Chapman College. I am also a Korean War Veteran having served four years in the United States Navy. I am founder and President of Calderon, Jaham & Osborn, a Certified Public Accountancy and Consulting firm which started as a one-man office and is now proudly headquartered in San Diego County with branch offices in Imperial County serving clients throughout the State.

I am active on several different boards including the California State Board of Accountancy which regulates the accounting profession in the State. I am one of two public members on the Treasury Oversight Committee for San Diego County. I also sit on the CDC Small Business Finance Corporation Board. My recent civic and business contributions includes the following agencies: the American Red Cross Board for San Diego and Imperial Counties, the United Way of San Diego Board, the Greater San Diego Chamber of Commerce, and the San Diego Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled.

These are representative examples of my professional, business, and community service accomplishments which I offer to the voters of East County in the upcoming Grossmont-Cuyamaca College District election. I am confident that you will agree that my credentials and accomplishments during my term at the Community College District will be rewarded by your vote and continued support.

Knowing the importance of family values which we all cherish, I am proud to say that all of the accomplishments listed above would have been difficult, if not impossible, to achieve were it not from my family. To my wife of 40 years, son and daughter, I again express my thanks. We are also proud residents of East County, residing in Mount Helix.

I will campaign diligently for this position. Mr. George Bailey, former Mayor of La Mesa and former two-term Supervisor for San Diego County, a man worthy of our respect, is my campaign manager.

To the voters of East County, thank you for your past support. I am confident that after you compare my qualifications against other candidates in Seat 4, you will honor me again with your vote and support.

Sincerely,
Victor M. Calderon
President, Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District

PG Perspectives

Barbarians at the plate

by Phillip Giannangeli

My friend Brentworth gets around. He hobnobs with all the big shots. Just last week, he was telling me about a dinner party he went to for big-wig Republicans. As a service to the readers of "PG Perspectives," I'm going to pass on Brentworth's story.

It was part of a gated community and everyone had to show an identity card to even get into the area. Once through the huge gates, every guest was escorted through a metal detector and asked what their positions were on term limits and school prayer. Once approved by the security people, guests were invited into a huge mansion with a fantastic dining room. Everything was very festive. After all, the Republican convention here in San Diego was coming up and excitement was running high.

Brentworth was seated with some of the lesser known guests at a table near the back of the room. On his right was a strange man who spent the evening warning about witches in the Air Force and lesbians in the schools. To Brentworth's left was a matronly woman, who whispered she had sneaked in for this occasion. She wore a clever disguise: a cross between a whimsical Nancy Reagan and a vulnerable Arianna Huffington. Lady A, as she insisted on being called, maintained she belonged at this august gathering and she wasn't going to let anyone throw her out. After all, she did hold the distinction of being California's first, and only, female Assembly Speaker. Lady A wanted back into the Republican fold, she said, and she thought this was her perfect opportunity.

Across from Brentworth sat a couple of local mayors and several school board members from the area. All these lesser dignitaries gazed rapturously as the people at the head table took their places.

Bob Dole had the seat in the exact middle of the table. According to Brentworth, he seemed to be focusing much of his attention to the right, but would on occasion confer with those on his left. To his immediate right sat wide-eyed Steve Forbes. Brentworth said that Bob and Steve seemed to get along famously, although some at Brentworth's table thought Bob might still be smarting from the nasty things Steve said about Bob a few months before. But as far as Brentworth could see, things looked fine on this special night.

Down at the far end of the table, to Bob Dole's right, were a trio of animated personalities. At the very end (barely accommodated at this perfectly arranged tableau) was Bob Dornan. Next to him was Alan Keyes and next to him, Pat Buchanan. These three were involved in very animated discussions stopping occasionally to glare coldly at the center of the table. At one point, all three pulled out their "Right-to-Life" Green Card to compare something.

To Dole's left, sat an uncomfortable-looking Lamar Alexander. Apparently, no one told him the dress was formal, so there he sat in his plaid shirt. He tried to carry on a conversation with Phil Gramm, but Phil was really mad at the seating arrangements. As far as he was concerned, he should have been to Dole's immediate right, and big-eyes should have been at one of the lesser tables. After all, Phil had conservative credentials long before Steve even knew he could run for president.

Brentworth said that the rest of those at the head table looked like a who's who of Republicans for 2000. Jack Kemp was there talking empowerment with Bill Bennett. Pete Wilson and Bill Weld were wearing their pro-choice neckties. Susan Golding, seated next to Pete, was batting her eyes at the state GOP leaders seated at the table just across from her.

Brentworth said that, as the evening wore on, toasts were offered and a few by Buchanan. He raised his glass and, looking right at Bob Dole, said: "Bob, guys your age should find a nice, quiet place and rock in your rocking chair. Leave the gays, the illegals and the abortionists to younger guys like me and Bob and Alan. We'll dust'em for you, Bob. Lock, load and L'Chaim."

That cracked everyone up, according to Brentworth. Dole came back with some reference to Pat's Irish-Germanic roots and Pete slapped Dole on the back for his oneupmanship. Lamar couldn't stop fidgeting and Phil was busy trying to get the literature. Susan continued smiling "at the state" GOP leaders.

All in all, Brentworth said it was a delightful evening, if you excluded the ugly scene where Phil Gramm exploded and hit the photographer because he said he took too many pictures of Lamar and not enough of him.

Brentworth has been to a lot of big affairs, but he said this one was truly a night to remember. I wonder if he'll get invited to any Democratic shindigs? Probably. As I said, Brentworth gets around.

Letters to the Editor

You get what you run for

In the company of other municipalities, the elected officials of Lemon Grove are, and always have been, underpaid. This is a fact that a comparison of salaries will confirm. Comparison of the quality of management of most San Diego County cities will also show that our city has had the best.

However, the remuneration for serving on our city council has always been well-documented when anyone looks to seek the office, and it is expected that they will understand what it is. The workload also should be accepted in running for office, and not whined about after the fact.

To seriously consider a raise in salary after being in office less than a month is surprising to say the least. In the opinion of all that I have heard regarding the subject, it is improper for the sitting council to raise its salaries after pledging to do the job as prescribed. If performance rates increase, then the public would probably approve of it, but they should do so at the ballot box.

'Hamlet' lead falls victim to thespian adage

by Marv Rosen

The final rehearsal of Hamlet, currently being performed by Octad-One Saturday and Sunday evenings at the outdoor theater "by the lake" at the East County Performing Arts Center, gave new meaning to the saying, "break a leg," which is meant to convey good luck to the performers.

Actor Jeffrey Jones, who plays the lead in William Shakespeare's famous play, was running on the wall when he slipped. In falling, Jones actually broke his leg, along with his wrist. But, as in another thespian saying, "The show must go on," and on he does.

Since the accident happened at the final rehearsal, the other performers have only alluded to the break a leg saying.

At each performance, Jones is carried down to a hassock set to one side of the staging area. From there, he emotes all of Hamlet's lines. The other performers, however, only rarely play directly to him. Instead they act as if he was where he would normally be. They struggle with Hamlet, without his being there, bow to the throne area where he would normally sit, fence with the spot, etc.

Jones said, before the performance on Sunday evening which was well attended, that it was hard and frustrating, not to be able to move and jump around as called for in the play, but because he is working with strong performers who could carry it off, the play has gone exceedingly well and been well received.

Winona McNitt, who plays Ophelia, said that she did perform directly with Hamlet during the scene where she kisses him, otherwise, all the action takes place, sometimes quite a distance away, in their normal positions on the open-air stage. It is really far apart when Hamlet is confronted by the ghost of this father, played by Vincent Baca, up on the wall completely across from where Jones sits.

A shoeless Jeffrey Jones (Hamlet) carries on the show with the aid of Kendall Burdett (Rosencranz) and Joshua Harrell (Gildenstern).

Jones added that the director of the play, Martin Gerrish, devised options to make it work using some unusual concepts so that Jones could communicate with the other performers.

Watching the performance is quite interesting, and was well done, despite the unusual situation. The free play (donations are requested) will continue at ECPAC each weekend until Aug. 25 with all performances at 6 p.m.

'Fiddler' on the Mount to open

Christian Community Theater's first production at the beautiful outdoor theater on La Mesa's Mount Helix is "Fiddler on the Roof," opening July 18 and running Thursdays through Sundays through Aug. 3.

"Fiddler on the Roof" features Jon Muench from Borrego as Tevye, the Russian Jewish peasant, whose philosophical conversations with God express his struggle to adapt to changing times and to see his five daughters married to proper husbands.

Muench, a ranger/pilot with the California State Forest Service, has portrayed Tevye for Pine Hills Dinner Theater as well as for a community theater in Borrego Springs.

Also featured are Dora Walker from La Mesa as Goide, Lisana Taylor from Murrieta as Yente the Matchmaker, and Martin White from San Diego as Lazar Wolf. The cast of 75 includes people from 19 cities, including the three older daughters Tzeitel (played by Paula Steiger of Spring Valley), Hodel (Wendie Provence of San Diego) and Chava (Sara Yellen of El Cajon.)

Tickets are $12-$20 with children under 12 only $8 and $2 off for seniors for any seat. Groups of 15 or more earn discounts and two free tickets.

Jon Muench is Tevye

Presenting its 17th season of musical theater, Christian Community Theater is a non-profit educational corporation presenting high-quality, family entertainment since 1980. CCT also operates CYT, an after-school theater arts program for children 6-18 and manages Theatre East, East County's Performing Arts Center located in El Cajon. For more information call 588-0206.

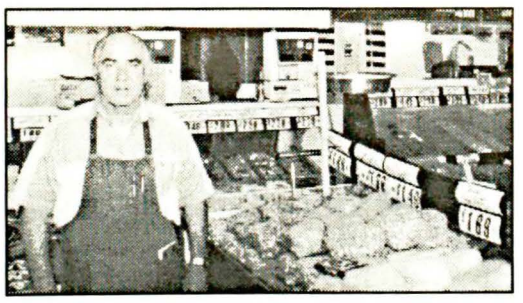
Ron's Country Corner



Ron Potthoff at Country Corner in Spring Valley.

Ron Potthoff has been taking care of the fresh meats and grocery needs of East County residents for the past 20 years. He is now located at Country Corner, 9573 Jamacha Blvd. in Spring Valley, so all of his long-time customers can find him.

Country Corner specializes in Iowa and Nebraska corn fed beef and pork, all cut fresh right at Country Corner by "real live butchers." (See the specials Ron is offering on freezer beef in the ad on Page 8.)

"We freezer wrap all our meats when the customer buys it, and will even package it in smaller packages for their convenience," Ron said. Freezer beef orders can be placed one day, and the customer can pick up the order the very next day, assuring the very freshest meats possible. All wrapped meats are clearly labeled, so even the non-freezer package can be readily identified.

In addition to the wide selection of beef and pork cuts, Country Corner carries fresh chicken. A wide variety of fresh fruits and vegetables can also be found at Country Corner, and fresh farm eggs from Ramona are delivered regularly to the store, by the flat or dozen carton.

Jews to ponder animals

Ever wonder about the many different animals mentioned in the Torah? Congregation Beth Tefilah will present an informal discussion on just this very topic, 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Beth Tefilah Social Hall, 4967 69th St. in San Diego.

As an open forum, participants may speak about or ask questions which pertain to a favorite animal, either modern or extinct. The discussion will focus on how different animals were meant to be used (e.g. for work, food or other).

Open to people of all ages, the program will include kosher refreshments. Donations to cover the room and refreshment cost will be appreciated.

For further information or reservations, call the synagogue office at 463-0391.

Lemon Grove bakers take cake

Congratulations go out to Carol Davis and Linda Carpenter of Lemon Grove for their recent wins at the Del Mar Fair in the Baked Foods and Confections competition.

Davis picked up a first-place prize for her Cinnamon entree and a second place for her entree in Rolls.

UFOs

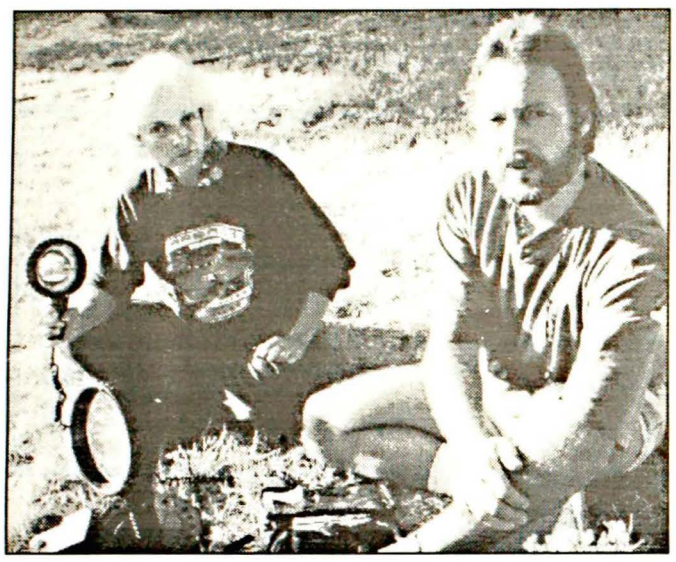
they encountered a dark, disk-shaped object about 12 feet in diameter with a round dome on top. They watched it for about five minutes and then one of them — Daniel Flemming or Richard Thiel — rapped on the thing with his flashlight, producing a metallic sound.

Suddenly, red light poured out of the dome on top and the object started to rise out of the grass. A row of green lights began to blink around the perimeter and the rotating object made a sound the boys described as "wooo shooo wooo shooo."

They ran, panicked, feeling like their legs were under water. The object flew off to the south.



Carolyn O'Patry and Bob Hairgrove hope to use high-powered flashlights, tapes and good vibes to flag down a UFO.

Fergus' mother lost her TV reception around 7:20 that night. The phone went dead. MUFON member Eric Herr, on the scene within days, confirms that nine neighbors reported TV static at that time. However, a second MUFON investigator, Don Carr, could not find any residual magnetism on the nearby chain-link fence or piece of pipe in the field.

Herr says the swirl in the grass was not as impressive as the two D-shaped holes, six inches wide and six inches deep.

Fergus remembers it differently. She discovered that if she stood by the swirl and threw her father's nails at the metal top on the Von Willer's back fence, they would stick like magnets. (If she missed, the nails went into the pool, prompting Mrs. O'Brien to tell them to stop throwing things.)

Men in suits were combing the Midose cellar, looking at the phone wiring. Fergus recalls they identified themselves as UFO investigators from Oklahoma. She also remembers stories that the electrical box across the street from the Von Willers had caught fire and caused the power problems. She said sheriffs had reported seeing the craft on Sweetwater Road.

Herr says a couple nights later, three Crane Street residents reported a second landing. This time it was a small, metallic saucer about three feet in diameter with legs some 12 feet long. One witness said the lower half of the probe would became transparent or invisible every 30 seconds or so, as the lights from the nursery down the hill would periodically shine through.

Twenty-three years have passed and the grass behind where the Von Willers and O'Briens lived is still matted. Crane Street will soon be plowed under to make way for Highway 125.

"I didn't talk about it for a long time," says Fergus. "What really jarred me was seeing my first crop circle on TV. Then I remembered that field. It was exactly what had been behind the Von Willers."

CE III

Hynek called reports of contact with UFO occupants "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," the term borrowed by Steven Spielberg for his famous film. While stories of abductions have become increasingly popular in the last 10 years, neither MUFON nor CUFOS have any reports of contact in East County.

Bob Hairgrove and Carolyn O'Patry would like to change that. They are members of the Center for the Study of Extraterrestrial Intelligence — CSETI (pronounced "See-setty") — a group determined to make contact with whatever's out in that sometimes wild blue yonder.

Hairgrove and O'Patry both decry the war-like aliens portrayed in "Independence Day," preferring Spielberg's earlier film visions of harmonious first contact and the lovable extra-terrestrial, E.T. Their quest for a CE III has taken Hairgrove to the wilds of Dulzura and Joshua Tree, and O'Patry to Area 51.

Hairgrove is a freelance title investigator living in La Mesa. As a child, he remembers seeing a triangular light drop out of the Arizona sky beyond the horizon. He ran in to tell his parents he'd seen a falling star.

In the early 1990s, he read about triangular-shaped UFOs and suddenly remembered that shooting star. Soon after that, he read about CSETI and met the group's leader, trauma-ward surgeon Steven Greer.

"We're trying to make contact," Hairgrove says. "In the past, people were passive, wondering about what they'd seen in the skies. Now, we're signaling back."

Hairgrove and company conduct "field work" in which they spend the night in a remote area, sending out three types of signals: sound, light and thought. The sound is usually a tape recording made during the formation of a crop circle (a sound which O'Patry describes as a like a cuckoo clock). The group uses high-powered flashlights to signal. They also perform "thought sequencing," in which they visualize the galaxy, the Earth and their position on the globe.

Hairgrove says these night excursions usually produce anomalous lights, not unlike the First Kind encounters of June 12. They've even had a stationary light repeat back to them the flash pattern from one of the flashlights. But no contact.

If it ever happens, Hairgrove says he's ready to leave friends and family and climb on board.

"I would have no second thoughts," he says. "I would not do it for selfish reasons; it would be to help mankind learn more and open a bridge. Someone needs to step forward and if I had the opportunity, I would."

O'Patry's urge to step forward took her from her home in Jamul to Area 51, a rumored secret military installation in the middle of the Nellis Air Force Range 95 miles north of Las Vegas.

Suspicions about secret activity in Area 51 went ballastic in 1993, when the government annexed another 4,000 acres of desert to keep the public away from Groom Lake.

The name "Area 51" comes from designations on old maps of the Nevada Test Site. There is a base on the shore of Groom Dry Lake that the government does not publicly acknowledge. Experimental aircraft such as the U-2 and SR-71 have been tested there.

O'Patry heard about it on a radio program out of Las Vegas. On Nov. 21, 1989, a physicist named Bob Lazar claimed he worked in an Area 51 installation called S-4, where he was hired to help "back-engineer" a captured alien spacecraft.

Lazar said the disk was equipped with three gravity amplifiers which allowed the craft to bend the time/space continuum and travel vast distances in a short time. He and his team were to replicate the technology, and Lazar got so excited, he eventually broke his secrecy oath and told a few close friends. When his superiors learned of the breach, Lazar decided to go public rather than disappear.

O'Patry drove out to Rachel, Nevada, soon after the radio broadcast, back before Rachel's Bar & Grill was renamed "The Little A'le' Inn."

Her 1991 trip was more eventful, meeting Area 51 celebrities like Lazar, Bill Cooper and Norio Hayakawa at a symposium at the Inn. The group went out at sundown to the lone black mailbox marking the turn towards the hills and the restricted border.

O'Patry rode out with Cooper, who claims he uncovered a One-World conspiracy while working in naval intelligence in the early 1970s. The CIA, Council on Foreign Relations, Trilateral Commission and aliens are all involved. Cooper stopped just short of where the road crossed government warning signs to film and shoot pictures.

About 8:30 p.m., Cooper had failed to find the public access road that runs in closer to Groom Lake, so he parked by a cattle feed station and prepared to hike. Suddenly, O'Patry felt the urge to turn around. She heard a brief rumbling sound from the south, over the Tikaboo Valley. Was it thunder?

"Without any further sounds, I saw four star-sized lights instantly appear in a vertical row — one after the other — just below the cloud cover," she says. "Just as suddenly, they appeared to be four bright-orange, moon-sized disks moving towards us."

Cooper was shouting and they fumbled with cameras and binoculars. Another set of three objects appeared to the right, becoming bright orange as they came near and then headed down over Tikaboo. A new object appeared, fading in and out of view as it crossed the sky. As it seemed to swing in an orbit overhead, another light appeared from the opposite direction. The two objects seemed to merge before zigzagging out of view.

O'Patry returned to her job at the El Cajon Courthouse, resolved to be an ambassador of goodwill should a UFO actually make a CE III contact. Since then, she's appeared on "Encounters" and "The Other Side."

"If you're coming from fear — which is where 'Independence Day' is coming from — you'll attract that," she says. "My fantasy is when the spaceship lands and they say 'Take me to your leader,' we'll say: We are the people! We are the leaders!"
